EXPERTISE

Commercial Litigation
Health Law
Insurance Law
Professional Regulation
Workplace Law

Brett's dispute resolution practice is focused on civil litigation defence, professional regulation, and workplace law.

Brett represents health professionals in various complaints, disciplinary, billing and other matters involving their respective regulatory bodies.

In his workplace law practice Brett advises employers and employees on a range of day-to-day matters such as employment contracts, terminations and wrongful dismissal claims, and workplace investigations. He has represented clients before the Human Rights Tribunal and Small Claims Court.

Brett assists insurance clients with a variety of coverage, liability defence, and subrogated matters involving bodily injury and property.

Brett has appeared before the British Columbia Provincial Court, Supreme Court, Human Rights Tribunal, and regularly attends mediations with his clients. Acting with senior counsel Brett has represented clients before the British Columbia Court of Appeal.

Brett completed his articles at Harper Grey. Prior to this, as a summer articulated student Brett had the opportunity to hone his litigation experience at the Insurance Corporation of British Columbia. He also spent a summer in a remote area of the Yukon working as a diamond driller's helper extracting core samples.

Born and raised in Kelowna, Brett has always maintained a focus on athletics. This has contributed to the strong work ethic, focus and drive he now brings to his legal practice.
