VANCOUVER, B.C., CANADA – From motor vehicle accidents, to errors and omissions, to disability claims, the sheer range of situations and matters that require an understanding of insurance law is broad and far-reaching. Harper Grey LLP’s publication, Contemporary Canadian Insurance Law, offers both lawyers and insurance professionals an overview of the current state of Canadian law as it applies to insurance-related matters. In addition to examining long-standing insurance law principles and emerging issues, Contemporary Canadian Insurance Law provides a comprehensive index providing immediate access to detailed case summaries and insightful commentary on cases that have helped shape the current state of this area of the law.

“This publication does more than showcase the depth of expertise of our insurance law practice group,” says Richard Bereti, Managing Partner of Harper Grey LLP. “It demonstrates our commitment to the development of practical and accessible resources for lawyers, in-house counsel and non-legal professionals in the insurance industry.”
